Travirca pleads guilty to Pretense charges

Former Hancock County Supervisor James N. Travirca pleaded guilty in federal court on Friday to two counts of mail fraud in connection with Operation Pretense, according to newspaper reports from Jackson.

Travirca was indicted on Feb. 10, 1988, and plead not guilty to the charges on a five-count indictment alleging he received kickbacks of $500 and $700 and receiving in cash approximately $1,200 "from persons or organizations other than his employer for or because of defendant's conduct in transactions and matters or a series of transactions and matters involving $5,000 or more concerning the affairs of Hancock County."

Travirca was the third Hancock County supervisor charged in the Federal Governments Operation Pretense and was defeated in his fifth bid for office in August 1987.

Three other charges pending against Travirca would be dropped in a plea agreement with the U.S. Attorney's office. He appeared Friday before U.S. District Judge William H. Barbour Jr. and entered his guilty plea.

During the plea hearing, Travirca's connection with Max Gilbert, vice-president of Holiman Equipment in Jackson was revealed.

Gilbert pleaded guilty last year to bribing supervisors and has testified against several of them. Holiman Equipment has not been charged.

In court Friday, Assistant U.S. Attorney Peter Barrett revealed the following scenario involving Travirca:

Four of five Hancock County supervisors, including Travirca, met with Gilbert in the summer of 1984 to see his $37,750 pothole patching machine in action.

Gilbert demonstrated the machine to supervisors Travir-ca, Roger Dale Ladner, Sam J. Perniciaro Sr. and Dolph Kellar.

After a discussion, Ladner told Gilbert he and the three other supervisors would vote to approve Holiman's bid if he could guarantee them all large enough kickbacks.

Several weeks later, Gilbert told Ladner on the telephone the kickbacks would be $500 each if the four supervisors would approve the purchase.

"We can go with that," Ladner reportedly replied.

The supervisors approved Holiman's bid after the bid was advertised locally Nov. 4, 1984.

Ladner was indicted on Dec. 3, 1987 in connection with Operation Pretense and has plead innocent to charges of bribery, fraud and extortion and is scheduled for trial on June 13.

Perniciaro pleaded guilty last year to mail fraud and extortion and resigned from his supervisor post after being re-elected, and awaits sentencing.

Kellar has denied any wrongdoing and is one of two former Hancock County supervisors who have not been indicted on Pretense charges.

In Court Friday it was revealed that once Holiman Equipment was paid, Gilbert gave Ladner $1,500 to distribute to other supervisors in January 1985.

Three weeks later at the Mississippi Supervisors Mid-Winter Conference in Jackson, Travirca met with Gilbert and asked for his $500 kickback. Gilbert paid him the $500.

Gilbert is cooperating with the federal government and awaits sentencing.

Barbour delayed Travirca's sentencing indefinitely while Travirca cooperates with federal officials. Travirca faces a maximum of 10 years in prison and $500,000 in fines.

As part of his plea agreement, prosecutors have recommended that any prison sentence be limited to three years on the conspiracy charge. On the mail fraud charge, they have recommended five years probation.

Additionally, Travirca would not be allowed to seek or hold public office.

Bay council restricts alcohol use in town

BY D. C. HARVILL

Those who drink beer or wine coolers on Bay St. Louis beach could be subject to a $500 fine and/or 90 days in jail if an ordinance passed by the Bay St. Louis City Council at a meeting this past week is enforced according to the way it reads.

Those who participate in baseball games at parks in the city could also be subject to the same penalties.

The ordinance was listed on the council's agenda for the May 17th meeting as pertaining merely to open and glass containers.

Identified at the meeting only as ordinance number 320, it was passed unanimously with all councilmen voting while members of the audience were involved in a discussion about a zoning change the council had just tabled.

The ordinance reads: "It shall be unlawful to consume or possess in an open container any alcoholic beverage while on any public street, outdoor public facility, any parking lot intended for public use and normally used by the public, or any public park unless alcoholic beverages are being sold or provided at such park in connection with organized activities sanctioned by the City."

The ordinance contains provisions allowing the consumption of alcohol at "bona fide public events," such as the Beachfront Festival, concerts in City Park and Mardi Gras parades as well as other functions provided they are authorized by the City, uniformed police or security protection is provided and a notice is published in a newspaper at least once before the event.

The mayor has sole authority to deem whether an event is to be allowed or prohibited.

When asked how this ordinance will affect people using the beaches Mayor Victor Frankiewicz said, "The beach is not considered a municipal facility, it is a county facility."

It should be pointed out however that there are city ordinances already in effect specifically concerning activities on the beach, which are enforced by Bay St. Louis police. Examples are ordinances concerning bonfires and prohibiting glass on the beach.

Councilman Charles Johnson, when asked about drinking beer on the beach said, "If you bring your beer to the beach, I don't think anything will be done about that. It is mostly for people standing on the street corner drinking."

City Clerk Edward Favre said, "It wasn't intended to apply to the beach, it was poorly worded; we may have to go back and clarify some points."

When asked how those participating in adult baseball games will be affected Favre said, "If beer is being sold at the park they can bring their own and drink it, if alcohol is not being sold and they are drinking it then they are in violation."

"There had been no ordinance giving police authority to disperse crowds. This ordinance is intended to give them that authority," Frankiewicz said.

He added that the ordinance was prompted by a recent incident. —Page 12-A

Offshore borings could provide crucial answer in sand beach repair

BY DENA BISNETTE

Soil borings scheduled as part of a U.S. Army Corps of Engineers shore protection study should provide the Hancock County Board of Supervisors with a crucial answer to their questions about sand beach replenishment.

Col. Larry Bonine, district engineer for the corps' Mobile, Ala., district, said Thursday that the offshore borings should start soon and results are expected to be available by July.

The board had requested the borings and has already appropriated the funds for them.

Information obtained through the borings is expected to indicate if there is a sufficient source of sand for beach replenishment and whether it is of a suitable grade for such use.

The board has already decided that buying sand elsewhere and trucking it in would be so expensive as to make the project unfeasible.

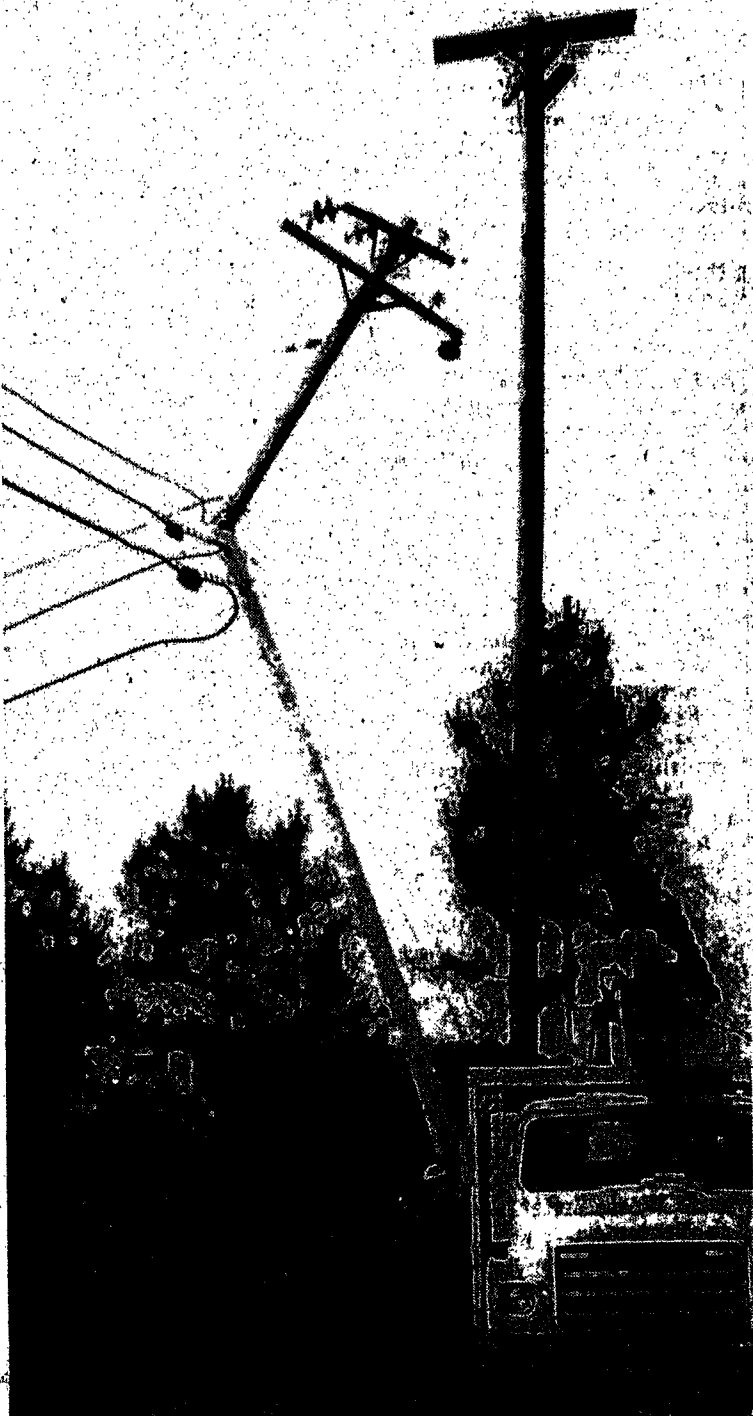

Bonine's report to the board and members of the Hancock County Sand Beach Technical Advisory Council was delayed a month due to a Corps scheduling conflict.

On Thursday, the colonel stated that the Hancock County study, delayed from the original two year schedule, has been given a high priority at the request of Congressman Trent Lott.

"I could tell immediately that somebody from here who was very, very concerned had been talking to him about the project," Bonine said.

He also stated that the corps had admitted made an error in delaying the study.

The study was begun under the previous board of supervi-

PAINTING A DOOR

The National Paint and Coatings Association suggests you consider painting a door from the standpoint of what it will look like when it is closed.

In other words, the side of the door that faces out to the hall should match the woodwork in the hall and that which faces in should complement the room's woodwork. The door edge with hinges should match the outside and the edge with the latch should match the inside.

To determine the dividing line on the frame and jam, apply a line of paint. Everything showing on the outside with the door closed should match the outside.

The rest should match the inside. That means painting up to and including the inside edge of the jam to match the inside.

You are almost ready to paint. First, however, are a few preparatory steps.

Remove the doorknobs and plates. Scrape off any loose paint and bevel the edges around bare spots using fine sandpaper. You can even lay a thin layer of wood filler in the bare spots to make an even surface with the surrounding paint.

If the old finish is glossy, slightly sand it to create better adhesion. Be sure to vacuum or dust off all sanding residue.

Put a drop cloth or newspaper underneath the door. Prime all bare spots and wood filler patches.

Now you are ready to paint. If the inside and the outside are to be different shades, make it a two-step process. Allow the first side to dry before starting the second.

If the door is flat, paint may be applied with a lint-free roller but then should be brushed out with the grain of the wood. If the door is paneled, use a three- or four-inch brush.

Start at the top, painting from the outside in and following the vertical and horizontal wood grains. Be careful to avoid paint drips in the bottom corners of the panels.

Use a one-inch paint brush on the edges, taking care not to let the paint flow around to the other side of the door. Do not paint the hinges.

Reflections

Servants, Not Princes

By Rev. Jerome LeDoux, SVD

"Presumably, it will not take another 300 years to appoint more black ordinaries."

These words had barely been hammered by my typewriter in an article on Bishop Curtis Guillery when Father Anthony Bourges, SVD accosted me just before Mass on March 15 to announce that Bishop Eugene Marino had been appointed archbishop of Atlanta.

Well, it took a bit less than 300 years, considering that Joseph Howze had been made ordinary of the diocese of Biloxi in 1977.

Frankly, this was hardly news to the Josephite Brothers and Fathers whose specialty is working among the blacks. For months it had been rumored that Bishop Eugene Marino, the flagship of their religious congregation, would be appointed to Atlanta.

What was news was the fact that history had once more been made in the U.S.: the very first black Catholic archbishop.

Once more, in all frankness, the push had been on for years to have some black bishops appointed ordinaries instead of the usual fare of auxiliaries to a reigning bishop.

Ambition was not the reasoning or the motivation behind this. Nor was power the motive. In its simplest terms, acculturation was the motive, the deep-set belief of the Catholic Church that the clergy should be as local as possible, as close as possible to the culture of the people of each given area.

With this in mind, it is not to be taken lightly that a black has been made archbishop of Atlanta. We are not dealing with tokenism or window dressing. Rather we are dealing with the deepest essence of Christian belief and practice.

"Like on like," is a time-honored belief and practice by which a particular people and/or culture is afforded their own role model and leader to achieve spiritual self-determination.

Standing counter, yet not opposed, to "like on like" is the universal nature of the Church which strives mightily to include all peoples, all cultures, every individual in salvation's plan.

These two, the very particular and the universal, are not exclusive but inclusive of each other and complementary to one another. The goal of reaching all peoples is best achieved by being of highly personalized service to each people.

This makes it obvious that Eugene Marino is God's personal tool for the blacks of the Archdiocese of Atlanta.

It must be just as obvious that Eugene Marino is God's tool in a less cultural way to all racas and peoples in Atlanta.

There is something singularly exciting, intriguing, vibrant and heart-warming in the appointment of Eugene Marino to Atlanta. That something goes all the way back to the earliest centuries of Christianity when popes were selected according to Church needs.

Above all, we must beware of the oft-repeated line that these bishops are princes, successors of the Apostles. It should first be remembered that almost all the Apostles were martyred. Finally, they are servants, not princes, even as Jesus came to serve.

Bay council condemns house; tables zoning change request

BY D. C. HARVILL

The Bay St. Louis City Council meeting last week was the scene of a vocal and animated confrontation over the condemnation of a house on Ballentine Street and a zoning change.

People who live near property for which Paul Vegas of Bay St. Louis has requested a zoning change from single residential to commercial voiced opposition to the change.

The property is located on Bouslog Street near the new post office.

Yvonne Sallinger an owner of several pieces of property in the vicinity said she is opposed to the change because she bought the property knowing it was residential and she intends to build a residence on one of them in the near future.

Judy Watson said, "I am the one who is going to be most affected by the change," because her property borders Vegas' property.

Those opposed to the change said they felt commercial buildings on that site would negatively alter the atmosphere of the neighborhood.

Vegas stated that he is more than willing to meet all the height and distance requirements for the property.

"I'm trying to do the least obnoxious thing with the property," Vegas said. "I don't think it is an unreasonable request."

Vegas intends to construct an office building on the property for Gulf Coast Security Services.

The Bay St. Louis Planning and Zoning Commission had recommended to the council that the request be denied.

Sallinger said, "I hope the council will go along with the commission's recommendation because those people have been appointed because of their expertise and they haven't arrived at that decision without much consideration."

The council decided to postpone a decision until it could consult with its attorney about complicated zoning laws, concerning split frontages and distances required between commercial buildings and residences, which apply to the property.

The attorney's findings will be presented to the council at its next meeting on Tuesday, June 7 at City Hall.

The council decided to condemn the house at 210 Ballentine Street after its owner Leonard Wilkerson, of New Orleans, failed to prove to the council that he had improved the property enough to live up to a good faith agreement he had made with the city 90 days before.

Council president John Wilkerson said he had inspected the house and unless a tremendous amount of money is spent on it the house isn't salvagable.

The building inspector's report stated that the necessary repairs to the house would cost more than a new house.

Mayor Victor Franckiewicz said he inspected the property and, "The entire rear of the house definitely has to go. What remains would still be an eye sore but not a public hazard."

"I understand if the house has sentimental value...but, you have to understand the position of the people around you, Councilman Wilkerson said." Brenden Wilkerson, the owner's son, suggested that a contractor be brought in to give an estimate on the cost of repairs to the house.

"If they are too high, then bring in the bulldozers, but if the cost isn't too high we would like to save the house, Brenden Wilkerson said.

Tom Williams, the neighbor who had filed the complaint against Wilkerson, in an animated outburst stated that he had, "Waited too long already."

for the situation to be corrected, that the condition of Wilkerson's house was affecting the value of other property in the neighborhood, and he hoped the council would do what should have been done long ago.

Williams later apologized to the council and all present for having made a scene, but that he was angry the situation had gone uncorrected so long.

Wilkerson had been notified by the council 14 months ago that something needed to be done about the condition of the house.

Councilman Wilkerson said he felt the council had been more than fair and had allowed more than enough time for the situation to be rectified and recommended to the council that the property be condemned.

The council voted unanimously for condemnation, but informed Wilkerson that it will be about seven weeks before the house can actually be demolished and that at any point during that time sufficient improvement to the property can be seen, the condemnation proceedings will be halted.

Councilman James Triffittay told Wilkerson, "I hate to make these kinds of decisions. I wish you weren't getting your property in order."

Coast Electric to sponsor business seminar

Coast Electric Power Association is hosting Paul D. Wilson, nationally noted lecturer and human relations expert for a "People Business" seminar.

The event is designed to help business owners and employees in their dealings with customers, said Robert Occhi, Coast Electric general manager.

"This seminar is not just for employees in sales or marketing. It is designed to help people become more effective, more efficient and more enthusiastic in their approach to the most important person in their business, namely the consumer," he said.

The seminars will be held Tuesday, May 24 in Bay St. Louis at the Coast Electric Crew Room; on Wednesday, May 25 in Picayune at the Cornerstone; and on Thursday, May 26 in Gulfport at the Holiday Inn Airport.

The two-hour program scheduled for 9-11 a.m., will cover such topics as: how "customers" are won or lost on the telephone; what the word "service" really means; listening, a lost art; and why pride, trust, caring and enthusiasm are often left out of many business training manuals.

Wilson, a native Mississippian from Hattiesburg, has more than 40 years experience in sales management and has worked with many major retail companies across the southeastern United States. "Coast Electric is proud to have Mr. Wilson visit south Mississippi to share his knowledge and insight with the people of our business community," states Occhi.

Anyone interested in attending the seminar should contact the Member Services Department, Coast Electric Power Association at 467-6535 or 1-800-624-3348.

EUROPEAN DEFENSES

Can Europe defend itself without nuclear missiles? How good are the Warsaw pact forces? Will America begin pulling troops out of Europe?

These are just a few of the questions facing the NATO alliance in light of the American-Soviet nuclear arms treaty.

A "Frontline"/Time magazine special with Judy Woodruff, "The Defense of Europe," at 9 p.m., Tuesday, May 24, on Mississippi ETV, probes the new realities that exist in today's Europe.

It was good news on Friday when President Ronald Reagan signed an executive order officially naming the National Space Technology Laboratory located here in Hancock County to the John C. Stennis Space Center.

Senator Stennis over the years has meant very much to Mississippi and especially the Gulf Coast.

Senator Stennis has been a pillar in Washington for over 40 years and is the most respected senator in Washington.

I have had the opportunity of speaking with Senator Stennis many times over the years and he is a very outstanding person.

We know Senator Stennis will be missed in Washington come January when he retires, but his good works will continue for many years to come.

I feel that we as Hancock Countians should be honored and thrilled about NSTL being changed to the John C. Stennis Space Center.

We know many of our elected officials feel that way too.

The many events this past week at the Mississippi Hospitality Center on Interstate 10 in Hancock County were very successful.

Sue VanZandt and her staff does a very fine job at the Welcome Center throughout the year and it is very good to see the many volunteers helping her and her staff during National Tourism Week.

Our Hospitality Center has some 63 acres on Interstate 10 in Hancock County, and the grounds are well manicured.

We keep telling folks how nice the Welcome Center is and it is a shame there are only a few residents who visit the facility.

One of the things a resident can find at the Welcome Center are many places of interest right in the state of Mississippi.

Stop in some time, Sue and her staff will be happy to greet you.

The qualified electors of Ward Three in Waveland should not forget to get out and vote on Tuesday to name an alderman.

Last Tuesday's race of four has now narrowed down to only two candidates and every vote on Tuesday will be very important.

It is hoped there will be as many or even more qualified electors who will exercise their right to vote on Tuesday.

We many times hear residents complain about how some elected leader is doing or not doing what seems to be proper to them, but they never take the time to vote when election time rolls around and try to elect someone they may think can do a better job.

We know an alderman position was won by only one vote in Waveland race several years ago, so we urge all qualified electors in Ward Three to please vote Tuesday.

The People's Business

County Unit: The "Beat" goes on

The Mississippi State Legislature has adjourned the 1988 session leaving a very important issue unresolved.

Now the governor has informed lawmakers that they will be back late this year to resolve the issue.

The issue that the lawmakers could not come to an agreement on, and is causing a special session on, is an additional expense to the taxpayers, is the reorganization of county government.

The question is not whether or not county government needs to be reorganized, for the evidence is overwhelmingly in favor of reorganization. The question is when.

Time and time again the unit plan for county government has been called for to replace the antiquated "beat" system, yet, despite the wishes of the people of Mississippi, the "beat" goes on.

Time and time again, the Mississippi Economic Council's plan for county unit has been called the most efficient form of county government.

Perhaps when the governor does call the lawmakers back to Jackson to address the issue of county government they will respond to the will of the people.

However, it is up to the people to make sure their legislators are aware of how they feel. It can't be assumed. Now is the time to make those feelings known.

WELCOME CENTER—The staff of the Mississippi Hospitality Center on Interstate 10 located in Hancock County consists of from right, Sue VanZandt, manager; Rocky Herring, maintenance; Barbara Moree, Frank Parker, maintenance; Gloria Hawkins and Donna Parsons. The group stands in front of one of the rosebeds in front of the Hospitality Center. The trio of maintenance crew including Don Alley not pictured maintains the 63 acres of the facility. Last week there were special activities for National Tourism Week and VanZandt reported some 1,046 visitors registered for the day Friday. (Echo staff photo by Ellis Cuevas)

Governor's Weekly Column

Beginning this week, Mississippi will have some powerful new weapons in its arsenal in the fight for business and industry, and our fair share of the international trade market.

On Friday, May 13, Govs. Bill Clinton of Arkansas, Buddy Roemer of Louisiana and I will have signed two joint agreements of cooperation. Our goal is to combine our resources to attract trade and to promote economic development in our region.

Collectively, we can do much more to make our three states an attractive region in which to do business. I would much rather compete with two neighboring states for business, industry and trade than the other 47.

What is so significant about these agreements is that we are not looking outside for help. Instead, we are looking to within for solutions.

There is a sense of rebirth in our three states. If we are successful, the country succeeds. We cannot have a truly vibrant country if we have pockets of despair, if there are places which do not fully share in the American Dream.

The only limitations we have ever had are those we have placed on ourselves.

These agreements are a powerful statement that we are ready to cast those limitations aside; we are ready to assume a leadership role in this country; and, we will take our place on the playing field of prosperity with the mainstream of this nation.

Briefly, here is what the agreements would do. The first is a general agreement of cooperation that calls for the states to:

Work to improve the quality of life in the region, create better lines of communication with the private sector, enhance the image of the region domestically and abroad, and identify specific initiatives to solve common problems.

The second agreement calls for the states to promote friendly working relations with foreign countries in the areas of international trade, industry, technology, and in commerce, culture and tourism.

Importantly, representatives of the three states will meet regularly to develop initiatives in accordance with the agreements. And, the first country to be targeted under the agreement is Japan.

It has been said that every beginning is a consequence—every beginning ends some thing. And, so it is that these agreements signal an end to business as usual, and the beginning of a new era of cooperation to undertake the bold steps necessary to make our region competitive.

This tremendous opportunity has existed for a long time, but it simply was not recognized. Often, it has been written, opportunities are not recognized because they go around wearing overalls and looking like hard work.

That is the way it is in Mississippi, Arkansas and Louisiana. But, by virtue of signing these agreements, we recognize this golden opportunity for what it is. I want you to know that much of that hard work, which will certainly bear fruit, begins with these historic signings.

The President's Column

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

By Ronald Reagan

In Washington, trade is the talk of the town—and important talk it is.

I have often mentioned trade issues in these columns. And with your help during these last few years, we have been able to resist attempts to block free and fair trade. It has not been easy, because not a few politicians still think the way to re-election is to portray themselves as the great friend of the American worker by pushing protectionism. It has been up to us to point out that over the long run this approach halts growth and costs jobs, but with your help this message has gotten through.

Believe me, this ability to resist protectionism—along with our commitment to lower taxes, less spending, and fewer regulations—has made a huge difference in all of our lives. I do not think any of us can easily forget that sense of desperation Americans felt a few years ago as they say inflation driving the weekly grocery bill up and up, the value of their savings shrinking, jobs growing increasingly scarce, and economic growth going down to virtually nothing.

All that has been changed around. Recently, Beryl Sprinkel, the head of my Council of Economic Advisers, went down to the White House briefing room to deliver his quarterly report on the state of the economy. Some experts, who had noted we are in the 65th month of our economic expansion, were saying a slowdown was inevitable, and others, noting last October's stock market plunge, made dire predictions about what the economy was going to do in the first quarter of this year. But the results were exactly what we had hoped for and, in fact, what we had predicted: the economy is moving along at a moderate rate of growth and inflation is well under control.

My fellow Americans, I remember only too well working in 1981 on my first televised speech describing "the worst economic mess since the Great Depression" and wondering

Eyes on Mississippi

By Bill Minor

JACKSON—Mike and Rosemary Parker won't be building their new home on a hillside of the family farm outside Brookhaven anytime soon.

Instead, they've had to forego borrowing $100,000 for the new home in order to invest in trying to send Mike to Washington D.C. as the new occupant of the state's 4th Congressional District seat.

So far the 38-year-old Parker, who owns funeral homes in Brookhaven and Meadville, has done amazingly well as a political novice in his quest for the congressional seat.

Parker literally came from nowhere to knock off eight opponents, several of them with good name identification, to win the Democratic congressional nomination in the March primaries.

Now Parker still has to face former Vietnam prisoner-of-war Thomas Collins III, the Republican nominee from Jackson, in the Nov. 8 general election for the 4th District seat being vacated by Democrat Wayne Dowdy.

If Parker does succeed in holding the congressional post in the Democratic column, he will be making an awfully big leap from a country funeral home operator to the U.S. Congress. Such a leap doesn't happen without a very big personal commitment and a lot of hard work.

As for personal commitment, Parker has done something hardly any political newcomer would do. He borrowed $237,000 against his funeral homes to pump into his political venture, providing almost 80 percent of the money he spent winning the nomination.

That meant putting in hock the successful businesses which he and his wife had worked hard for 10 years to pay off. "All I've done in my life is work," the wavy-haired, plain spoken Lincoln countian says.

Now that he's won the Democratic nomination, Parker is expecting to reduce his personal campaign debt by setting aside part of his contributions. But so far he's chipped only $17,500 off his debt.

Parker made a strategic decision to spend $75,000 to $100,000 on television early in the campaign in order to gain name recognition "just to be equal with everybody else" in the nine-candidate first primary field.

That decision was made, he says, before Parker brought on board Stan Flint as his campaign manager. After managing the meteoric rise of Mike Moore to the attorney general's office last year, Flint has become the hottest commodity around in the campaign management business.

Flint, who turned down several other better known politicians to work for the unknown Parker, says he sensed from the first time he met Parker that he had a candidate who would be a winner.

And Parker, who says his key to success in business has been "getting advice from the people who are successful" immediately decided that Flint had the political know-how he needed.

They agreed on the strategy that while other candidates were having to spend a great part of their time hustling campaign contributions, Parker would spend his time looking for votes instead of fund raising.

"We just worked harder than anybody else," says Parker, who was not content for instance to go to a plant gate one time for a shift change. "I would catch a plant gate three different times to let them see how dedicated I was and a lot of them didn't forget me," he says.

Flint says his theory of being successful in politics is "50 percent competence and 50 percent providence."

During the first primary campaign he and Parker and their wives were flying to Washington at night in a private plane loaned by a supporter. As they headed toward Knoxville, Tenn., an engine on the turbo-prop plane lost oil pressure and died.

Unable to make radio contact with Knoxville, the pilot had to push his remaining power to the limit to get up above the mountains and gain radio contact with Atlanta. Amid the praying that was going on in the plane, Flint said, "we were able to make a safe landing in Chattanooga."

"Now that was providential," the dark-haired, mustachioed Flint says.

Flint had worked three or four months free for Mike Moore last year when Moore's campaign was financially strapped. Then when Flint finally went on the payroll, Moore recalls, "it was not very much." But after Flint's success with Moore the numbers went up.

Parker guaranteed Flint $11,600 for the first primary and another $11,600 if he made the runoff, win or lose. Now Flint will get a bonus for the general election plus his salary.

Together, Parker, the son of a Baptist minister, who has the ability to become evangelical when the occasion demands, and Flint, the hard-driving young political craftsman, make a rather potent team.

The Great American Investment

even then how long it would take us to repair the damage.

Well, thanks to the dynamics of less government and more free markets, the damage has been repaired, and repaired much faster than anyone could have originally hoped. And that is why I am certain you do not want me or Congress taking any risks with this progress. And that is also why I have made it clear that I am going to be very severe with any trade legislation coming out of Congress that threatens America's prosperity.

For the past year, we have all been working on a trade bill here in Washington, one that initially contained many objectionable provisions. Working with Members of Congress, we managed to remove almost all of these bad provisions. Unfortunately, however, when it comes to safeguarding prosperity, almost can never be good enough. The current legislation, despite all the hard work, still has provisions that threaten economic growth.

These provisions are comprised mainly of demands for unnecessary, burdensome, and costly regulation of private industry. Provisions range from rules on plant closing notifications to restrictions on exports. Unfortunately, these provisions serve the special interests and not the nation's interests. They would reduce the flexibility of our economy and render us less able to respond to the realities of the international marketplace. In short, they would make us less competitive, not more.

This bill did pass the Congress recently, but the good news is, the vote showed we have the strength to sustain a presidential veto. And you can be sure that this bill is going to get a veto, but fast. And then all Congress has to do is drop the ruffles, frills, and flourishes put there for special interests, and we can have a trade bill and have it soon.

As I have stated repeatedly, I want a trade bill and will work vigorously to secure one. I urge the Congressional leadership to schedule prompt action on a bill immediately after my veto is sustained. It is time to set aside the special interests and advance America's interests by passing trade legislation that will assist, not impede, our dynamic economy.

In the meantime, I am delighted to tell you that there is some good news on trade. Prime Minister Mulroney of Canada was recently in town, and we discussed our two nations' pending agreement on an historic free-trade zone between the United States and Canada. This is the kind of trade legislation we need.

The Meadow Lark

It all started in 1982 at Sun 'n Fun with the ultralight movement. I got the building bug again. Now, at 72, I have flown my own creation, The Meadow Lark...and what a thrill that was!

I had the plane completed and inspected in February '85 but since the EAA Chapter 479 Airstrip was a little rough in spots and only 2,800 feet long with trees at both ends, I elected to wait to fly it until I could get hangar space at Stennis International Airport, about 24 miles to the west. In September they had space and I moved the plane over there.

Now as to the test flights on September 18 and 19. We had strong crosswinds and Stennis has only one 8,500 ft. runway running north and south. However, I put in about one hour of high speed taxiing and was satisfied with the way the airplane handled.

The next day was about the same until late afternoon...the time had come for the first flight.

I made one high speed run down the runway, turned around and taxied back, checked the traffic, got in position and opened it up. Acceleration was very rapid, but at first the nose would not lift. Then, all of a sudden, I was airborne and had more altitude than I cared for. I cut the throttle and made a good landing; the control was super. I was, to say the least, delighted; however, I could not understand the rapid take-off and climb. I taxied back to the hangar and called it a day. I wanted to think this over.

The next day I made six flights, all of them a lot of fun and with a great deal of pride.

The control was excellent and I found out the reason for the rapid takeoff.

When all three wheels are on the ground, the wing is at a very low angle of attack and the nose wheel will not lift off until the wings start to lift. This plane will not take off until it has good flying speed no matter how much up elevator you apply. Same thing holds true when landing; when you dump the nose the plane stays put.

I had my time flown off and the airplane was certified on Nov. 11, 1985. Since then I have had many hours of fun flying, with no major problems. There's no experience in the world like flying along at a leisurely speed in an open cockpit airplane watching the landscape move majestically below.

A brief description of the construction of the plane would be in order at this time. I was interested in the Ultralights and the freedom they offered. However,

I wanted a more substantial structure that would afford better pilot protection. With this in mind, I started the design; it would be open cockpit, tractor propeller drive, body welded up of 4130 steel, wood and foam wings and tri-gear.

At first I designed a tapered wing using the 230-15 airfoil and then I remembered about an article in Sport Aviation (July 1976) that described the 'Super Floater' glider designed by the late Klaus Hill and also Larry Hall. This glider had a very good wing with a L/D ratio of 14/1. I called Larry and was able to secure the plans. The only thing I used, however, was the airfoil, but I learned later that it has been used on other designs. I do not know what airfoil it is but suspect it's an old German glider design.

I used web-spars with 3/4 x 3/4 inch spruce caps with the rear side covered with 1mm birch plywood. One inch thick foam nose ribs were used, spaced 5 inches apart and covered with 1mm plywood. This made a very strong D section. Reinforcements of spruce were added at the root and flying strut attachment points. I used urethane foam and all bonding with T-88.

The ribs aft of the spar were made from 1 inch foam capped with 1mm plywood. Trailing edge and wing tips were 1/2 inch aluminum tubing. The drag bracing was a triangle 22/24/33 inches built as part of the aft side of the front spar and going back along the root rib where a false spar was constructed for the rear wing attachment fittings. I constructed a gas tank in each wing in the triangles using fiberglass and 'Safe-T-Poxy' and covered them top and bottom with 2mm plywood. Total gas capacity is 10 gallons.

The body was constructed using 4130 steel tubing. My good friend and Chapter Designer, K.V. Lundy, did a super job of welding it up. I had everything jigged up and took it over to him. I'll have to admit some things looked very strange, but K.V. never questioned what the end results would be. I'll bet he wondered at times.

The main gear is welded out of 3/4 x .035 4130 tubing with one-half inch shock cords. I used modified wheelbarrow wheels for the mains. The nose wheel is steered by both rudder pedals and has a brake pad at the top that is activated by a lever near the control stick. The steering is very positive.

The lift struts are 12 x .059 aluminum with 1-1/8 x .035 4130 ends drilled for 5/16 inch bolts. The struts have an inner lining of 1-1/8 x .059 aluminum to take care of compression loads.

The engine is an inverted Cuyuna 430 with a 3 to 1 planetary reduction gear. The propeller was made by Catto.

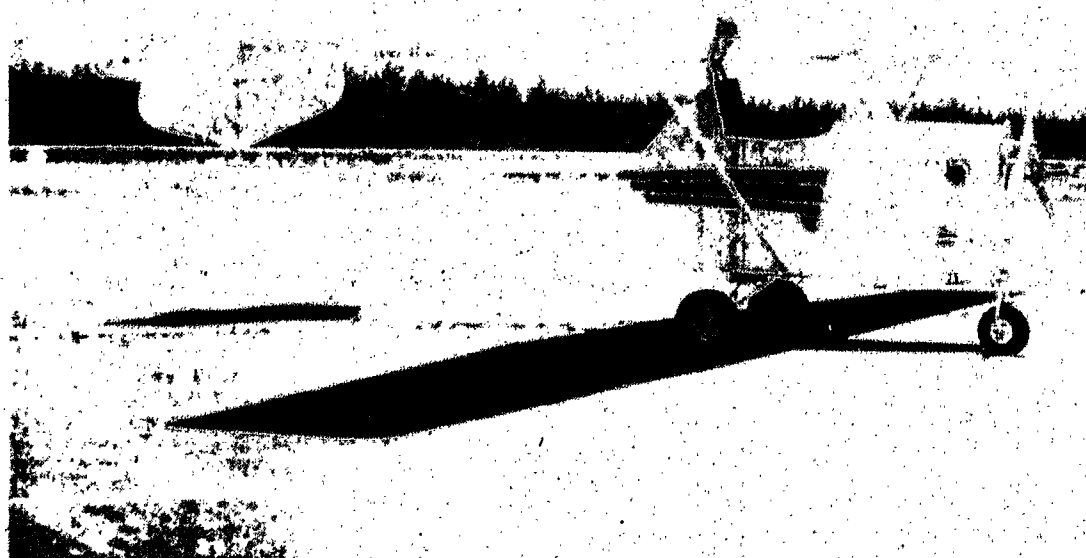

The covering was all Stits with finish coats of DuPont Acrylic enamel.

The plane's empty weight without the Second Chance parachute is 305 pounds and the gross weight is limited to 550 pounds due to the parachute size. The climb on take-off can be 1,000 feet per minute at 60 mph but this will drop off, when the engine heats up, to 750 feet at 40 mph. A two-cycle engine will lose power when it heats up.

The design figures show that top speed should be 80 and cruise 70 mph. However, the actual figures are 10 mph below this. I will need another propeller with a different pitch to realize the best performance. Stall is at 30.

My aircraft building experience goes back to my high school days when I built a Northrop primary glider in the school building on off hours and finished and flew it after graduation in 1934. I started a Corben Baby Ace in 1935 and it was flying in 1937. It has a Salmson AD9 engine with a speed ring.

The last I heard, it is still flying and owned by Dick and Mary Geist in Wichita, Kan. There were other projects, one of which was restoring a 1940 Rearwin Cloudster in 1967-71.

Radio controlled aircraft models including a one-quarter scale model with up to a seven-foot wing span will also be on display at the air show.

The 1988 Gulf Coast Air Show is the first to be conducted at the EEA groups's new quarters at Stennis Airport in Hancock County.

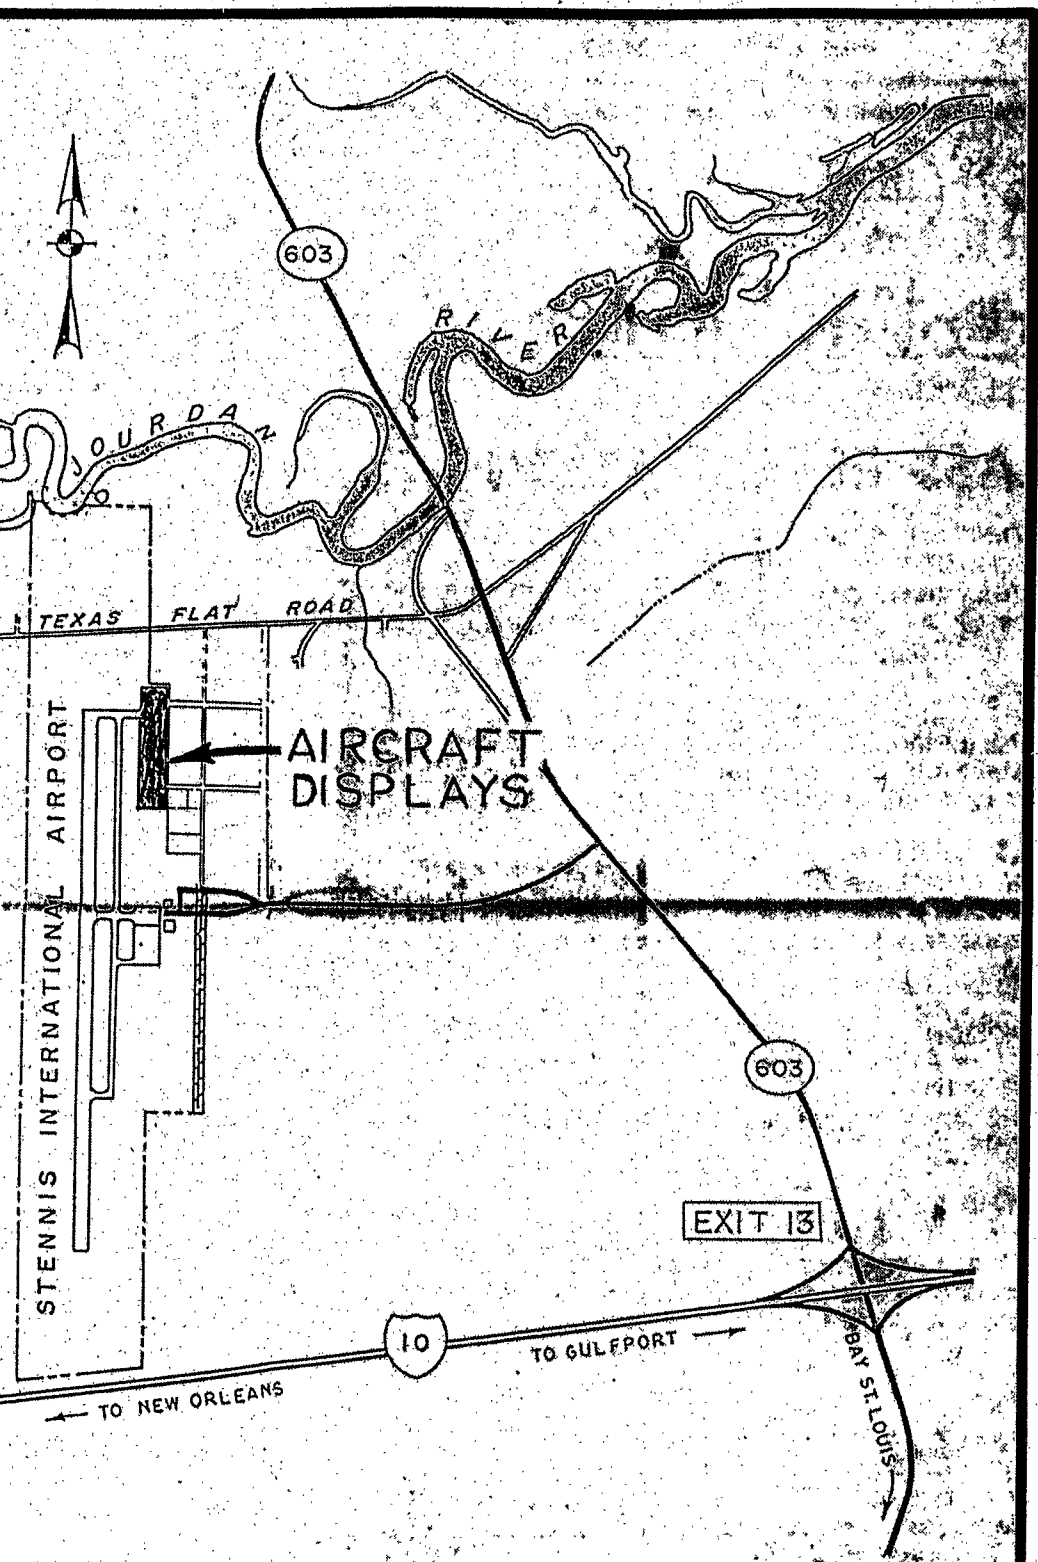

Previous shows were conducted on a small grass airstrip north of Gulfport and were known as the Shade Tree Fly-In and Air Show.

This year's show at Stennis

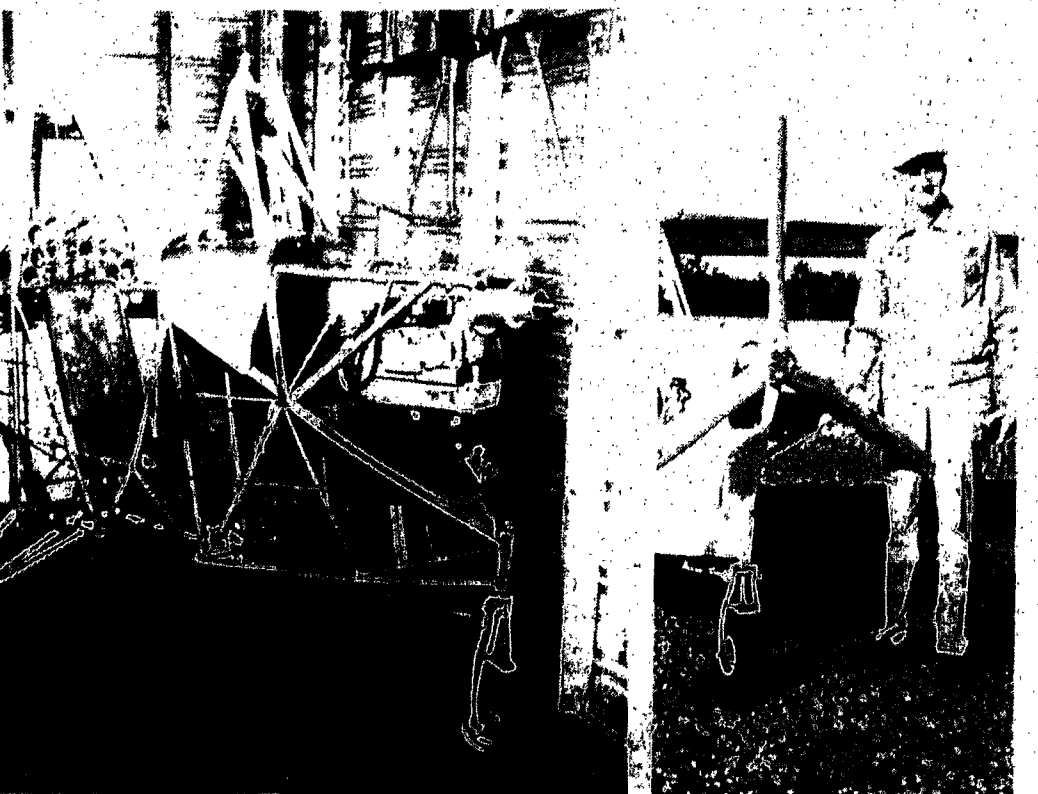

Airport will be much larger than past shows because of expansion allowed by Stennis' runway, according to Martin Fagot of Bay St. Louis, EEA spokesman.

The air show will be conducted in an old-fashioned family style with many interesting aircraft, food and refreshments for the enjoyment of the general public, Fagot said.

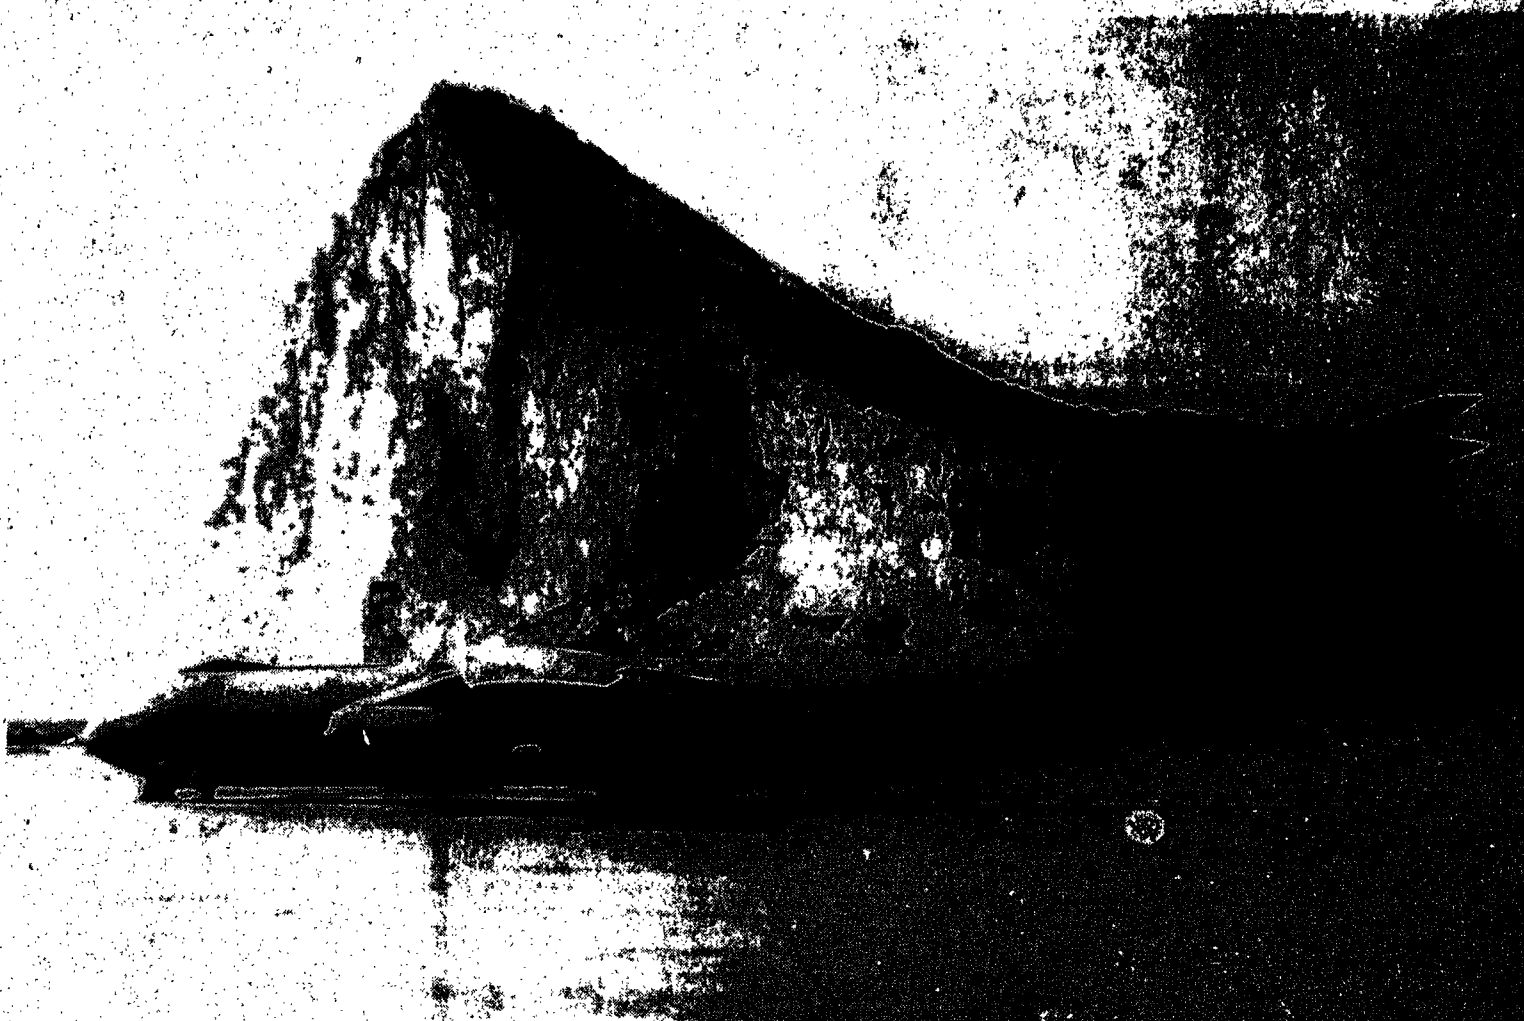

"Plan to attend the Gulf Coast Air Show Memorial Day Weekend at Stennis Airport," he urges.

Stennis International Airport is owned by Hancock County and operated by the Hancock County Port and Harbor Commission.

C-141

C-141 to be largest craft at Gulf Coast Air Show

With the length of 168 feet, more than half a football field long, the C-141B cargo transport airplane from the Air National Guard in Jackson will be the largest airplane at the Gulf Coast Air Show set for Memorial Day weekend at Stennis Airport.

This aircraft is one of at least nine different types of military aircraft scheduled to be featured in the air show which is being sponsored by the Experimental Aircraft Association Chapter 479.

The C-141B is a high wing, T-tail, long range transport aircraft powered by four turbo-fan engines. It is equipped for aerial refueling and aerial delivery of both cargo and personnel. The aircraft can be rapidly loaded and unloaded through the aft cargo opening and is an efficient carrier of wheeled or tracked vehicles.

The C-141B is a reflection of the need for specialized capabilities in military airlift and operational experience with one of these aircraft revealed that in many flights the aircraft had maximum volume capacity without reaching the aircraft's maximum payload capacity.

By including aerial refueling capability in the C-141, the U.S.

Air Force was able to increase productivity in this aircraft by as much as 42 percent, which is the equivalent of 90 new aircraft.

The prototype of the C-141B rolled out on Jan. 28, 1977, and the 270th production aircraft was delivered in June 1982.

The C-141 and other military aircraft will be just one attraction at the Gulf Coast Air Show.

Columbus Air Force Base to provide T-37 Tweet for Gulf Coast Air Show

The T-37 Tweet is a twin-engine jet used for undergraduate pilot, undergraduate navigator and tactical navigation training.

It is used to train students in the fundamentals of aircraft handling and instrument, formation and night flying. The Tweet is the first aircraft designed specifically for this purpose.

The Tweet's twin engines and flying characteristics give student pilots the required feel for handling the larger, faster T-38 Talon later in the undergraduate pilot training course.

The instructor sits beside the student pilot in an enclosed cockpit, making training easier. The cockpit has dual controls, ejection seats and a jettisonable clamshell-type canopy.

The T-37A made its first flight in 1955 but did not go into service with the Air Force until 1957. All T-37A's have been modified to T-37B standards.

The T-37B became operational in 1959. The B model has new radio navigational equipment, UHF radio and redesigned instrument panels.

Many foreign air forces fly the T-37B, including those of Thailand, Greece, Chile, Jordan, Turkey and Pakistan.

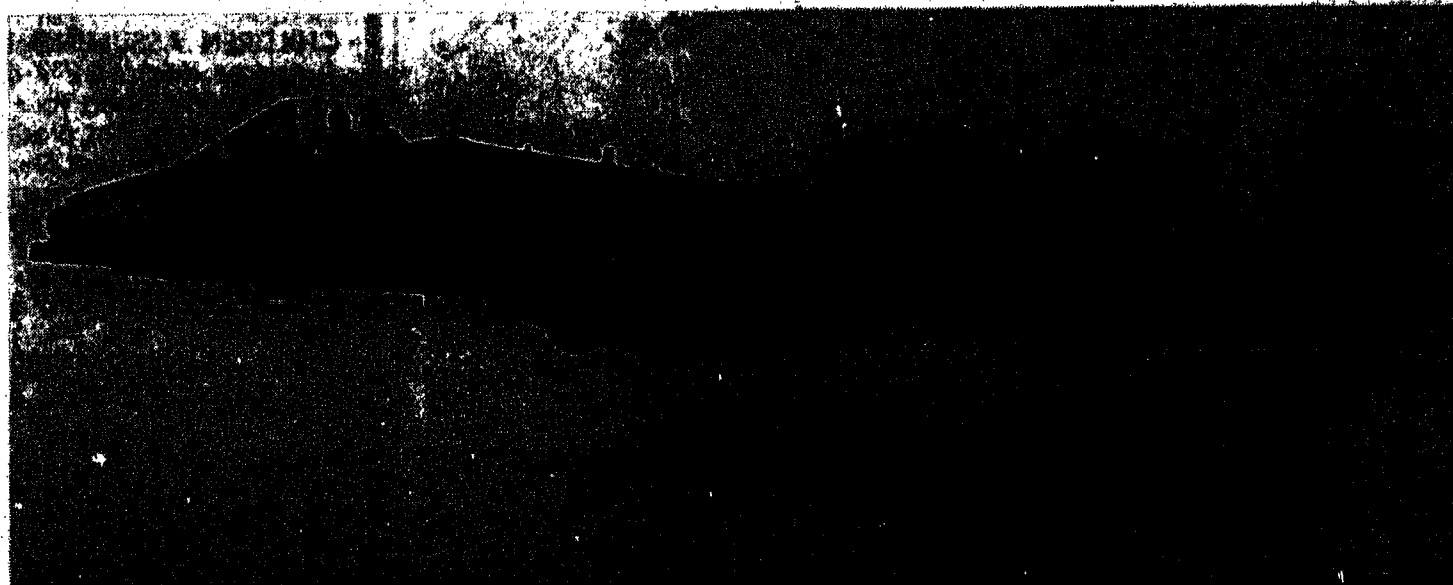

Students from 12 North Atlantic Treaty Organization countries train in T-37B's at Sheppard Air Force Base, Texas.

The T-37C is similar to the T-37B, but has provisions for both armament and wingtip fuel tanks. The air forces of Portugal, Peru, Columbia and Greece among others, fly the T-37C. The plane can carry two 250-pound bombs. Associated equipment includes computing gunsights and a 16 mm gun camera. For reconnaissance missions, the aircraft may be fitted with various cameras.

Bay police arrest two for drugs

BY ELLIS CUEVAS

Bay St. Louis police arrested two residents on Thursday in connection with the alleged possession of a controlled substance and intent to distribute.

Mark Ohman, Bay St. Louis deputy chief of police said, Kelly Brandau, 26, 111 Central Ave. and William Joseph Tudury, 34, 305 Ballentine St., were arrested Thursday afternoon for the possession of approximately one eighth of an ounce of a controlled substance and with intent to distribute.

The substance believed to be cocaine is being analyzed by the Mississippi Gulf Coast Crime Lab, Ohman stated.

The two were taken to the Hancock County Criminal Justice Facility and released on $5,000 bond each for Thursday's arrest. A preliminary hearing before Bay St. Louis Municipal Judge John Chevis is scheduled for June 1.

Tudury was also charged with the sale of a controlled substance from an earlier undercover operation and bond was also set at $5,000 for that charge, Ohman said.

During Thursday's arrest, a 1984 Buick Skylark was seized, Ohman added.

Thursday's arrest was made by Chief Ray Murphy, Ohman and Bay detective Tommy Burleson with assistance from Sgt. Chuck James and patrolmen Richard Hannah and Eric Hollman.

HOUSING EXAMINED

In 1949, Congress established the goal of "decent housing and suitable living environment for every American family" with the National Housing Act of 1949.

Four decades later, America is in the midst of a housing crisis. Millions of families and individuals are on the streets, are living in substandard, dangerous housing units or are awaiting low-cost public housing—on years-long waiting lists.

"Locked Out of the American Dream," a new one-hour documentary premiering at 2 p.m., Sunday, May 22, on Mississippi ETV, takes a comprehensive look at the growing shortage of affordable housing in the U.S.

ETV SPECIAL

"The tube." Television. TV. More than just a machine children watch mindlessly, it has become a tool for teaching.

Six of the state's most creative teachers, both elementary and secondary, who are making use of television in the classroom, are the subject of ETV's "The 25" Tutor II."

Jackson newsman Howard Ballou is host for this half-hour special at 4 p.m., Sunday, May 22, on Mississippi ETV.

Viewers go into the classroom with these teachers, each the winner of one of the Mississippi Awards, sponsored by Mississippians for Educational Broadcasting, the friends group for educational television and public radio in Mississippi, to discover how instructional television is used to enhance the learning environment and to act as a springboard from which interaction and learning may take place.

Library offering summer programs

This summer the Hancock County Library System will offer a summer library program for elementary-aged children to encourage them to read during the months away from school.

Summer library programs are given each year at the City-County, Waveland and Kiln libraries. Children going into first through seventh grade may join.

Pre-registration for the library program begins May 23 and continues through June 3. Activities, such as movies and crafts, are presented weekly at each library, beginning June 7 at the Kiln Library; June 8, at the Bay St. Louis Library; and June 9 at the Waveland Library.

"We invite all elementary-aged children to have a little fun and gain in their education, by joining the summer library program," said Prima Wusnack, library director.

For more information, call the City-County Library at 467-5282, the Waveland Library at 467-9240 or the Kiln Library at 255-1724.

Latchkey Children

By Dr. Roger Oge
Superintendent
Bay-Waveland Schools
One of the negative changes of our area is the growth in the number of children who return home each day from school to an empty home. Children are sent to school each morning with latchkeys either in their pockets or hidden away at home to allow them entry into their vacant home upon return from school.

The United States Census Bureau estimates that from two to six million children ages 6 to 13 are alone—or with other children—after school for many hours each day. If the trend continues, by 1995 there may be as many as 35 million "latchkey" children. Certainly, working parents much prefer not to leave their school-age children alone; however, there often is no other financial choice.

Our children of the Bay St. Louis, Waveland and Hancock County communities are no exception to the problem. Perhaps the following suggestions may help those parents faced with the problem:

—Decide if your children can stay home alone. Decide whether your children are mature, confident, responsible, and process good judgment. Are they frightened of being alone? How would they handle emergencies? How much time alone could they handle? Could they follow the rules you set? Pose some real problem situations for your children to see if their reactions are sound.

Ask—"What would you do if the electricity goes out? The dog runs away and you aren't supposed to leave the yard? Friends want you to ride bikes further than you are allowed? Your sister cuts her finger? An older person is late arriving? You miss your bus?"

—Notify the school staff of your child's situation. The principal, teacher, counselor or other may help you to provide meaningful activities for your child. School officials should know if your children are expected to be unsupervised before or after school on a regular basis.

—Plan, Plan, Plan. Plan for safety, emergencies, friends, siblings, responsibilities, etc. Children are most secure when they know exactly how long they will be alone, what is expected of them, and where to secure help if problems occur.

—Each child must know his own full name, address, phone number, parents' full name, exact name of workplace, and work phone number.

—Establish a checking system. Children should call a parent, or leave a message at their parent's workplace, as soon as they arrive home each day. If you are going to be late, let your children know. For those children allowed to leave home, make certain that they know where they are going and for how long. Well written messages about chores, snacks, etc. welcome children coming into an empty home.

—Be safe, not sorry. Establish clear rules about personal, household, and fire safety.

Don't allow the use of stoves or hazardous appliances. We read too often about children alone dying in fires. To reduce this hazard, teach children how to get out safely in case of smoke or fire.

—Keep phone numbers handy. The phone numbers of parents, doctor, poison control center, police, fire, nearest neighbor or relative should be kept near every phone. Make certain the children know how to use our new 911 system.

—Make firm rules. Make and enforce firm rules, about whether or not friends may visit; whether or not the child may leave home; etc. Plan the rules together; write them down. Praise children for following the rules.

Lastly, leaving children home alone at any time, even under the best of conditions and preparation is risky. Leaving children home without preparation is a certain invitation to disaster.

Gill netting question remains open, outside Waveland jurisdiction

BY DENA BISNETTE

Two groups of fishermen who went before the Waveland Board of Aldermen to discuss a proposed gill net limitation ordinance have received a surprise answer.

Board Attorney Lucien Gex told the fishermen that Waveland has no jurisdiction over their question.

The groups included a delegation of commercial fishermen led by John Luksa and Bob Metz, and a delegation of sports fishermen led by Tommy Barrett.

The sports fishermen met with the board May 3 and asked the aldermen for an ordinance limiting gill nets to 1,200 feet from the shoreline and banning gill nets altogether during the fish breeding season.

The commercial fishermen sent their representatives to meet with Mayor John Longo Jr. after hearing about the proposed ordinance.

According to Gex, however, the city has no authority to pass an ordinance because the city limits do not extend past the water's edge.

Bay St. Louis has such an ordinance, but the city limits there extend about halfway into the Bay of St. Louis, giving the city council authority to govern what is done in that area as long as state regulations do not supersede any local restrictions.

The only exception is riparian rights, which allow anyone who owns beachfront property to build piers or oyster reefs up to 750 feet from the shoreline.

According to Gex, that right is the city's basis for being able to build an extension to the Garfield Ladner Memorial Pier, although the attorney said that there could be a question of jurisdiction should the pier extend past 750 feet and law enforcement be needed.

The city could have jurisdiction over the gill net question if Waveland annexed 1,500 feet of the Mississippi Sound.

However, the board agreed to gather more information on the matter before discussing a possible annexation.

To do so would require a petition to the Hancock County Chancery Court and would take 60 to 90 days, which would not provide the fishermen with any immediate answer on possible gill net limitations, Longo commented.

Gex even explained, in answer to a fisherman's question, that the city does not have liability for accidents that occur in the water, unless they originate from a city-owned pier.

The city would have liability if it annexed part of the Mississippi Sound.

Gex said that although the city limits extend to the water's edge, the Hancock County Board of Supervisors has governmental jurisdiction over the Beach Road and the sand beach, while the city police department and the sheriff's department both handle law enforcement matters.

The mayor told the fishermen they needed to ask the county for an ordinance.

However, Jim Lane, chairman for the Mississippi Saltwater Fishermen's Coalition, said his organization has been working with Bureau of Marine Resources and the Mississippi Department of Wildlife Conservation.

Although the sport fishermen have contended that gill netters do not leave them enough fish and the commercial fishermen contend that the efforts of recreational fishermen have already banned their nets from most of the state's shoreline, Lane urged the groups to work together.

He said his organization includes both sport and commercial fishermen interested in conserving resources such as redfish and speckled trout.

He invited the mayor and fishermen to a wildlife commission meeting Monday in Biloxi.

The coalition is advocating a closed season for all fishermen each year during fish breeding seasons, with the dates and duration of that season to be determined by Bureau of Marine Resources biologists.

The board of aldermen meets again at 7:30 p.m. June 7.

President renames NSTL John C. Stennis Space Center

BY ELLIS CUEVAS

Local political leaders are elated over President Ronald Reagan's executive order Friday renaming the National Space Technology Laboratories in Hancock County to the John C. Stennis Space Center.

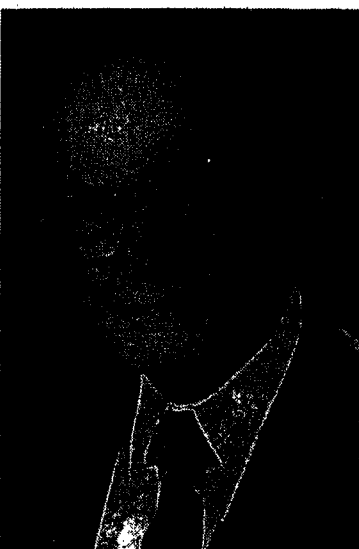

Ronald Cuevas, Hancock County board of supervisor's president upon hearing the news said, "I think it is a wonderful thing. It is well-deserved and befitting a man who has dedicated his life to Mississippi and our nation."

"Senator Stennis has been a great help to Hancock County in bringing jobs and helping our county with economic development. He well deserves the honor he has received from President Reagan," Cuevas added.

Victor Frankiewicz, Bay St. Louis mayor commented, "Fantastic. Senator Stennis has been a tremendous help to this county when he got us the Mississippi Test facility as it was originally called. He stood solidly behind us when he got the Navy here and he helped a third time with the Mississippi Army Ammunition Plant."

"Senator Stennis is unquestionably the most deserving individual," Frankiewicz stated.

John Longo said, "Senator

SENATOR STENNIS

Stennis is the greatest statesman who has ever served in Washington from the state of Mississippi. His efforts and total dedication made the Mississippi Test Facility available to us in Hancock County and without him it would not have located here."

"It is only proper for President Reagan to have renamed the facility in his honor," Longo proudly allowed.

Several members of Mississippi's delegation in Washington had requested the facility be named in honor of Senator Stennis.

President Reagan signed the executive order Friday afternoon to rename the NASA center for the distinguished Mississippi Senator who is retiring after 41 years of service to the nation and the state.

The president's executive order states, "Sen. John C. Stennis has served his country as a United States senator for over 40 years and has steadfastly supported the nation's space program since its inception. He has demonstrated visionary leadership and has consistently worked to assure United States world leadership and preeminence in space."

NASA Administrator James C. Fletcher said, "John C. Stennis has served as the father of NSTL since he led efforts for its creation. His leadership of the nation's space program stands as a monument to his career of significant accomplishments."

At NSTL, director Jerry Hlass said, "Senator Stennis made major contributions to our country and our state throughout his long distinguished career. His support to the national space program has been consistently strong since NASA's inception. His close association with our center has contributed significantly to the growth and progress we have experienced over the past 27 years."

"He has been a leader and strong advocate for a preeminent role in space for the United States. The senator's interest in the advancement of science and technology continues today with his support of the Space Station, our nation's next logical step into space," Hlass added.

The Hancock County facility is one of eight NASA centers in the country. NASA selected the location in 1961 to test the Saturn V first and second stages for the Apollo program. The site was designated the Mississippi Test Facility when Saturn rocket testing began.

In 1974 the installation was named the National Space Technology Laboratories because of its achievements and unique capabilities in space applications and Earth resources technologies.

During the period between the Apollo and Space Shuttle programs, Stennis was instrumental in helping NASA achieve full utilization of the installation's facilities.

Today, the NASA center employs more than 5,400 people and it is the home of 18 federal and state agencies engaged in environmental, oceanographic and defense-related activities.

Senator Stennis is a frequent visitor to the space center that now bears his name and continues to support the space agency's current and future efforts.

In his December 1987 Report to Mississippians' newspaper column, the senator wrote, "While it is essential that we prioritize our spending and bring our federal deficit under control, we must look ahead to the future of our country."

The next logical step in space exploration is the establishment of a permanent Space Station that will assure world leadership in space for our country in the 1990s and beyond. We must be committed to this important program that will enhance our capabilities for scientific learning while stimulating our nation's economic development and defense programs," the column continued.

SPECIAL GREETING—Visitors from California are greeted at the Mississippi Welcome Center on Interstate 10 by Darlene Underwood, left, Hancock County Home economist; and Sue VanZandt, center manager. dent where policemen responding to a call were confronted by a drunken, angry crowd at the corner of St. Francis and Sycamore Streets.

"Earlier reports of this being a total ban are wrong," Frankiewicz said. "It is intended to allow social drinking at public functions, but at the same time prevent everybody's good time being ruined by a few drunks."

Council president John Wilkerson said he would "have to reread the ordinance because the way it was reported it isn't the ordinance I voted on."

Also prohibited is the possession of any glass container at any of the locations prescribed by the ordinance regardless of its contents.

When contacted concerning the ordinance, Tyson McMahon, president of the Downtown Merchant's Association withheld comment until he could meet with association members, but did say, "The association is greatly concerned over the ordinance and intends to study its effects on businesses in Bay St. Louis."

Friendship Oak DAR

The Friendship Oak Chapter of the National Daughters of the American Revolution met on Saturday, May 14, at the Ramada Inn in Long Beach with Mrs. James R. Thomas, regent, presiding. Mrs. R. L. Morton, hostess for the luncheon meeting, provided several spring bouquets for the tables. Twenty-four members were present.

Mrs. Thomas brought the meeting to order following luncheon and reports were given by the National Defense chairman, treasurer and secretary.

Three candidates for membership were presented by Mrs. Philip R. Davenport, registrar, and all were approved by membership: Mrs. Elizabeth Hanberry Graham and Mrs. Frances Hanberry Wilson, both of whom transferred their memberships from elsewhere, and Mrs. Moody Irby, who was accepted as a new member.

Miss Lucy Herndon Ewin was honored upon the 50th anniversary of her membership and service to DAR. Mrs. Nunez C. Pilet read a tribute to Miss Ewin and presented her with a certificate of 50-year membership and the book, 'Apples of Gold.'

A new prisoner of war medal recently instituted by Congress was presented through Congressman Trent Lott by Mrs. Thomas to Mrs. Pilet on behalf of her late husband, Col. Nunez C. Pilet.

Col. Pilet was Gen. Jonathan Wainwright's chief of staff and was confined as a POW on Corregidor on May 6, 1942 and held prisoner by the Japanese at several different locations until August 20, 1954.

Col. Pilet, a native of New Orleans, retired from the Army in 1954 and in 1961 the Pilets moved to Bay St. Louis.

Mrs. Thomas announced that the chapter received the National Gold Honor award and that there will be a 'Lineage Workshop' at the Ramada Inn in Jackson on Saturday, June 11. A certificate of appreciation was received from the Mississippi Council of the Blind in recognition of service by the chapter.

Mrs. James Young, charter member, presented a program on 'Indians of the South.' Biographies of several prominent Indians were given, including Sequoyah and the Cherokee Tribe, Opothle Yahola of the Creek Tribe, and Pushmataha and Kilihote, who were both Choctaws.

Mrs. Young stressed that these men were leaders and patriots who worked and sacrificed for the common good in the South, and who did not hold resentment when their land was taken. Many Southerners can be proud of their Indian blood.

Mrs. Thomas announced that Friendship Oak is making a contribution to the Indian Scholarship Fund of Mississippi in Mrs. Young's name, in recognition of her research on Indian history.

The next meeting will be held Sept. 10. Women in this area interested in affiliating with or becoming a new member of NSDAR should contact Mrs. Philip Davenport of Bay St. Louis or Mrs. William Gemmel of Diamondhead.

EVERYTHING WOMEN ALWAYS WANTED TO KNOW ABOUT MALE SEXUALITY -

(BUT WERE AFRAID TO ASK)

Wednesday, June 8 7:30 p.m.

Frequently, women ask the important questions about health matters when they notice changes in the sexual relationship and it is true that many husbands and lovers withdraw from their intimate relationships because of tears and misconceptions about sexual performance. At least 50% of couples have sexual concerns and we believe that women hold the key to sexual health in the modern loving relationship. Recovery of a satisfying relationship begins when the woman asks the questions that, when answered, leads to a compassionate understanding of the problem. Help is available for the asking. In an educational program designed to help the process of sexual healing or relationship enhancement, the Sexual Medicine Institute of Southeast Louisiana will be asking and answering some of the major questions about male sexuality. Stephen Southern, Ed. D., Sex and Marital Therapy Consultant, will provide information about the physical and emotional changes that males experience. His discussion makes the complex responses of male sexuality easier for women to understand. Esteban O.
